

CONTENTS

About the author	ix
Preface	x
About the companion website	xiii
PART 1 GETTING YOUR BEARINGS	1
1 What is a case study?	3
Is the case study scientific?	7
Some definitions	9
What is a case?	11
What is and is not a case?	14
What is the case study good and not good for?	17
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	23
Further reading	24
2 The case study and research design	25
Doing the right kind of research	25
What is design?	26
First things first: your purpose	27
Next, your question	28
Literature review	30
How to go from idea to question to case study	31
Questions and different approaches to research	35
Design frames and methods	37
Using storyboards to help you design your case study	38
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	44
Further reading	45
3 The whole is more than the sum of the parts: seeing a complete picture	46
Break things down or see them as wholes?	46
Gestalt psychology	50
Dramas, theatres and stages	51

- Ecological psychology 53
- Systems thinking 56
- If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ... 59
- Further reading 61

- 4 Rigour and quality in your case study: what's important? 62
- Is the 'sample' important in case study? 62
- Do I have to worry about reliability and validity in a case study? 64
- Triangulation 67
- Positionality 68
- Generalisation 68
- Finding or regularising 73
- Quality 74
- If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ... 76
- Further reading 76

- 5 Ethics 78
- Your participants 78
- Vulnerable groups 79
- Participants' activity 80
- Deception or concealment 81
- Confidentiality and anonymity 81
- Data security and stewardship 82
- Consent 83
- Contacting participants 89
- Care for your participants – and yourself 89
- Where do I put discussion about ethics in my case study write-up? 90
- Getting clearance – ethical review 90
- If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ... 93
- Further reading 93

- PART 2 SELECTING A CASE AND CONDUCTING THE STUDY 95

- 6 Different kinds of case studies: selecting a subject for your case study 97
- How do you select your case study subject? \ 98
- Same starting points, different paths – there's no right way 111
- Kinds of case studies 112
- If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ... 117
- Further reading 118

7 Your purpose: thinking about the object of your study	119
Intrinsic	120
Instrumental	120
Evaluative	121
Explanatory	123
Exploratory	126
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	132
Further reading	132
8 Your approach: theory testing or theory building; interpretation or illustration	134
Theory testing or theory building	135
Drawing a picture – illustrative-demonstrative	141
Interpretative	147
Experimental	153
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	158
Further reading	159
9 Your process: the shape, style and manner of your case study	161
The single case	162
Time as a dimension of the case study	165
The multiple or collective or comparative case (or cross-case analysis)	172
Nested case studies	177
Parallel and sequential studies	180
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	182
Further reading	183
PART 3 COLLECTING EVIDENCE, ANALYSING AND WRITING UP	185
10 Out in the field: some ways to collect data and evidence	187
Interviews	189
Accounts	190
Diaries	191
Group interviews and focus groups	191
Interrogating documents	193
Questionnaires	193
Observation	196
Image-based methods	198
Measurements and tests	199

Official statistics and other numerical data	200
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	201
Further reading	202
11 Analysis: a toolkit for analysing and thinking in case study	203
Interpretative inquiry: eliciting themes	204
Constant comparative method	204
Theme mapping	206
NVivo	207
Grounded theory	210
Thick description	211
Word clouds	212
Sociograms	212
Systems thinking	214
Drawing storyboards – the nuts and bolts	217
Developing your theory	219
Using narrative	225
Think drama	229
Being intuitive and imaginative	232
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	234
Further reading	235
12 Writing your study	236
Structure	236
Writing up your case study	238
Two examples of good analysis, argument and writing	244
Some rules for writers	247
If you take only one thing from this chapter, take this ...	249
... and this – a final thought	250
Further reading	251
Other reading	252
References	253
Index	261